Daylight Forensic Partners with Lachman Consultants to Offer FCPA Counsel And Regulatory Compliance to Pharma and Medical Device Companies

New York (Dec. 15, 2009) – Daylight Forensic & Advisory, a leading regulatory advisory and investigative firm, announced today a new partnership with Lachman Consultant Services, a leader in advising pharmaceutical and medical device companies, to help companies deal with compliance issues, including the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA).

Recent pronouncements by the United States Department of Justice to aggressively enforce and investigate violations of the FCPA, targeting pharmaceutical and medical device companies as well as their individual executives and board members, leaves them open to potentially massive legal and financial liabilities. The combined services of Daylight and Lachman can help companies who are concerned about FCPA liability proactively limit and manage their risk on these issues.

“We are proud to be joining with Lachman to provide consulting services to individuals and companies in the pharma and medical device industries,” said Joseph Spinelli, Chief Operating Officer, Daylight Forensic & Advisory. “Companies operating in this space are learning that the DOJ is actively pursuing FCPA-related investigations and expect companies to begin taking steps to limit their fraud exposure and put adequate systems in place to avoid problems. The combined resources and expertise of Daylight and Lachman can help companies by ensuring they have an effective compliance program in place.”

Daylight Forensic & Advisory has unparalleled FCPA and anti-corruption expertise. Daylight has developed and implemented enterprise level automated third party risk assessment and due diligence systems and programs, developed and implemented customized compliance training programs, conducted investigations, and assessed and enhanced compliance programs, including internal controls systems, for some of the world’s largest companies.

Lachman Consultant Services, Inc. has exceptional knowledge and experience in all aspects of pharmaceutical and device compliance, regulatory, science and technology matters, covering discovery, development, filing and approval, manufacturing, distribution and post- marketing surveillance. Lachman works with global pharmaceutical and device firms to develop, implement, audit and remediate systems and controls for corporate compliance programs.
